TIP, OF THE BARNUM-BAILEY HERD, DE-CLINES TO DIE IN PUBLIC.

HIS DEATH WARRANT SIGNED FOR CAUSE AND A BIG PARTY OF NEWSPAPER MEN GO TO SEE

HIS END-THEIR FOUR HOURS

WATCH IN VAIN.

A comedy which was scheduled as a tragedy held the boards at the winter quarters of the Bar-num & Bailey Show, at Bridgeport, yesterday. The spectators consisted mainly of New-York newspaper writers. The chief comedian was a villanous old elephant, Tip by name, and his sup-port was composed of William Wallace, of the Museum of Natural History of New-York, and about eight or ten of his assistants. Mr. Wallace came up from New-York "loaded for elephant." and Tip was to be his victim. His pockets were loaded with cyanide of potassium capsules, and his assistants had a whole dissecting outfit wherewith to administer the earthly effects of Tip after that supposedly innocent pachyderm had absorbed the poison. But Tip was "tipped" in fact, as well as in name, and firmly but courseously refused to be "tipped off" by cyanide of potassium or any other disagreeable dose of museum compounding.

Tip the Wary, it should be said, is a prominen member of the big herd of elephants who munch peanuts, stand on their heads, and in other ways amuse the thousands who annually flock to the Barnum & Bailey Show. He has huge tusks, with beautiful brass knobs on the abbreviated ends thereof, and a large head. Tip is also twenty-one years old, and yesterday he proved that his large head was well supplied with brains by outwitting Mr. Wallace and his myrmidons. For some months Tip has been a persona non grata in Mr. Bailey's diplomatic family of men and beasts by reason of a constantly increasing disposition to smash things. In fact, he is a bad elephant, and when he playfully knocked one of his keepers into the hospital recently and positively refused to listen to the words of advice of his chief guardian, William Newman, or to pay heed to the prods of the ele-phant hook with which that advice is usually punctuated, Mr. Bailey decided to give him his passports beyond that bourne from which no travelephantine or human, returns. So he invited Mr. Wallace to come up and assist Tip to perform the "happy dispatch." But there was one flaw in the arrangements-Tip was not consulted. And when the proposition was presented to him in the concrete form of a pail of bran mash containing cyanide of potassium, a dozen or two paraffine capsules of the same, and a peck of carrots whole thing out. The net result was two score of disgusted newspaper men, who lost their dinner vainly walling to see an elephant die, and the complete failure of Mr. Wallace to play the part of Borgia to the elephant dynasty.

The newspaper party went up to Bridgeport in the morning on a special car with R. F. Hamilton, the guide, philosopher and friend of the whole newspaper fraternity, in charge of the personally conducted tour to the winter quarters. The first supposedly fatal dose was administered at 12:20 in a pail of encoulent bran mash. The natural history experts announced that Tip would die in twenty minutes. But Tip had other plans. He did nothing of the kind, He ate the food with relish, and then settled back to meditate on the best way to kill an elephant-keeper.

settled back to meditate on the best way to kin an elephant-keeper.

No results being observed, Mr. Newman stepped up, unfastened the chains that held the beast's head down, and ordered him to hold up his head and open his mouth. Into the capacious cavern thus disclosed, Newman defly threw half a dozen enormous parafine-coated capsules of the poison, each sufficient to kill a herd, if digested, Tip's little eyes gazed at his old keeper with an "et tu Brute" expression, and then he calmiy chewed the dose up and spat it out on the floor, in serene denance of the rules of the Board of Health in such case made and provided. Then he trumpeted his opinion of the entire priceeding, and settled back for a nap.

opinion of the entire processing, and for a nap.

Another form of strategy was next tried. Apples and carrots were loaded with the poison and given him. He took these in his trunk, crushed them against his tusks, let the poison drop out, and ate the harmless residue with relish. For four weary hours the congregation sat about and waited for symptoms, but none were forthcoming, except those of excessive fatigue on the part of all concerned.

That elephant fived all day.
That elephant fived all night.
All the pills they rolled will never be told,
But that elephant would not nite.

All the pills they rolled will never be tone.

At first everybody was nervous, and kept at a respectful distance. The big doors of the elephanthouse were thrown open that the line of retreat might be clear in case the death agonies of the great brute should cause him to break his chains, or incite the rest of the herd to rise in mutiny against their keeper; but, after the first bour, the spectators came up and sat by the patient, near enough to feel his pulse and take his temperature, if desired. At the last Tlp grew thred and lost his appetite, and that was the sum total of results.

Before feeding Tip the visitors were admitted to the boudoir of Johanna, the famous chimpanzee, and found her at lancheon. She ate heartily, using knife and fork and mapkin after the most approved forms of table etiquetie, win ling up with a glass of wine and a toothpick. Then, with the assistance of her valet, McKay, she put on a pair of stockings and shoes, a red house gown with ruffled front and a stunning Easter hat, and promenaged back and forth in her cage with all the grace of a Fifth-ave. Belle.

Out in the yard the monster team of forty horses, four abreast, were hitched to a hig band-wagon and manoeuvred with a skill that would make Lawson N. Fuller green with cavy.

CHRIST CHURCH OBJECTS TO HAVING ANOTHER CONGREGATION IN ITS IMMEDIATE TERRITORY.

There is some talk among the members of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Forty-sixth-st., near Sixth-ave., of buying the site now occupied by the Transfiguration Chapel, at the Boulevard and Sixty-ninth-st., and building thereon a new church. This proposition is as yet merely under informal discussion, and all sides of the matter will be thoroughly considered before any action is taken. The court of final resort with regard to this proposal so far as St. Stephen's Church is concerned is the Standing Committee of the diocese, and this body

It appears that the members of Christ Church, at the Boulevard and Seventy-first-st., are opposed to the proposal that St. Stephen's Church build so near to them. They contend that two Episcopal churches of the same school of churchmanship so near each other would be sure to conflict one with another; in other words, that the field is not large WHITE PLAINS.

Late last Saturday afternoon, in the course of the examination before Commissioners Lyons, Schmid and Hunt into the sanity of Arthur W. Palmer, charged with killing his mother, sister and brother at Mamaroneck recently, the prisoner caused a scene in the courtroom, the particulars of which were not made known until vesterday. Dr. John F. Hunter, of Mamaroneck, was on the stand, and District-Attorney Andrews asked the doctor if he thought it was an indication of unsound mind in Palmer when he asked a certain person some time previous to the murders what a man should do to people who would attempt to separate him from his wife, and added that for his part he would kill them. Palmer became infuriated. He violently denounced the District-Attorney, and said he never asked such a question. It required the united efforts of four court officers to prevent Palmer from seizing a small table with which to strike the District-Attorney. He was finally quieted, and further hearing in the examination was adjourned to March 26.

Misses' and Children's Millinery,

60-62West 23dSt. nunununununu

To describe the indescribable is the Herculean task set before us in trying to give a pen picture of some of the many novelties coming daily from our factories. Nothing that interests you in the furniture way is lacking. Each of our eight extensive floors is niture, and the variations of design are infinite and unique. The prices are as satisfying as the goods, as you BUY OF THE MAKER"
